SYNOPSIS	French is running a martial arts gym, training promising new fighters -- but it hasn't exactly been paying the bills. To make ends meet, he begins working for the notorious (but elusive) Tommy, servicing various criminal outfits throughout Southern California. Working by a number scale, with #10 being a threat and a #1 being a full-on trip to the hospital, French and his partner Sue are in charge of chasing down any kind of criminal or low-life who owes money to the organization. Beating, fighting, chasing, breaking bones and sliding through traffic from one job to another it's always something new. But when French has to track down an Irish barkeep with a secret, he encounters someone worth saving and will have to question himself and maybe do the right thing... for once.
